

EJOT, Bad Berleburg — New doors installation

Albany RR392 – Reliable Draft Protection and Sure Logistics with EJOT

Every day the production and shipping department at the EJOT group in Bad Berleburg transports huge amounts of goods. Its doors receive not only trucks bringing goods in or shipping them out but also vehicle and person traffic. The search for a door solution, one with high safety standards, one which rapidly opens and closes in order to avoid draft and loss of warmth, as well as one which is able to withstand strong winds and therefore last longer, was solved with the introduction of the Albany RR392 from ASSA ABLOY Entrance Systems.

The high standards of this durable industrial door available at a competitive price are apparent in every detail. Highly rigid and transparent door curtains help avoid collisions and protect against draft therefore balancing the distribution of energy and improving the general work environment.

Safety functions on the Albany RR392 like the electric safety contact edge secure and improve the work environment as well as the production process.

EJOT is a middle-sized business group providing fastening solutions. With its beginnings in the former screw factory of Adolf Böhl in westfalian Berghausen, EJOT has grown and diversified to become what it is today: a successful corporate association with more than 2000 employees, 1300 of which work in Germany and a further 700 acting internationally.
