Sintered Compact Surface

Nexion
ITALIAN STYLE THAT INSPIRES

Product Definition

Nexion Facade

- Is a Sintered Compact Surface.

Product Definition

Sintered Compact Surface

- The Sintering technology replicates the process in just a few hours by which stones are naturally created over a period of thousands of years.
- It consists of subjecting the raw materials to very high pressures and temperatures and represents an accelerated version of the metamorphic changes that natural stone undergoes when subjected to high temperature & pressure over thousand years.

Product Definition

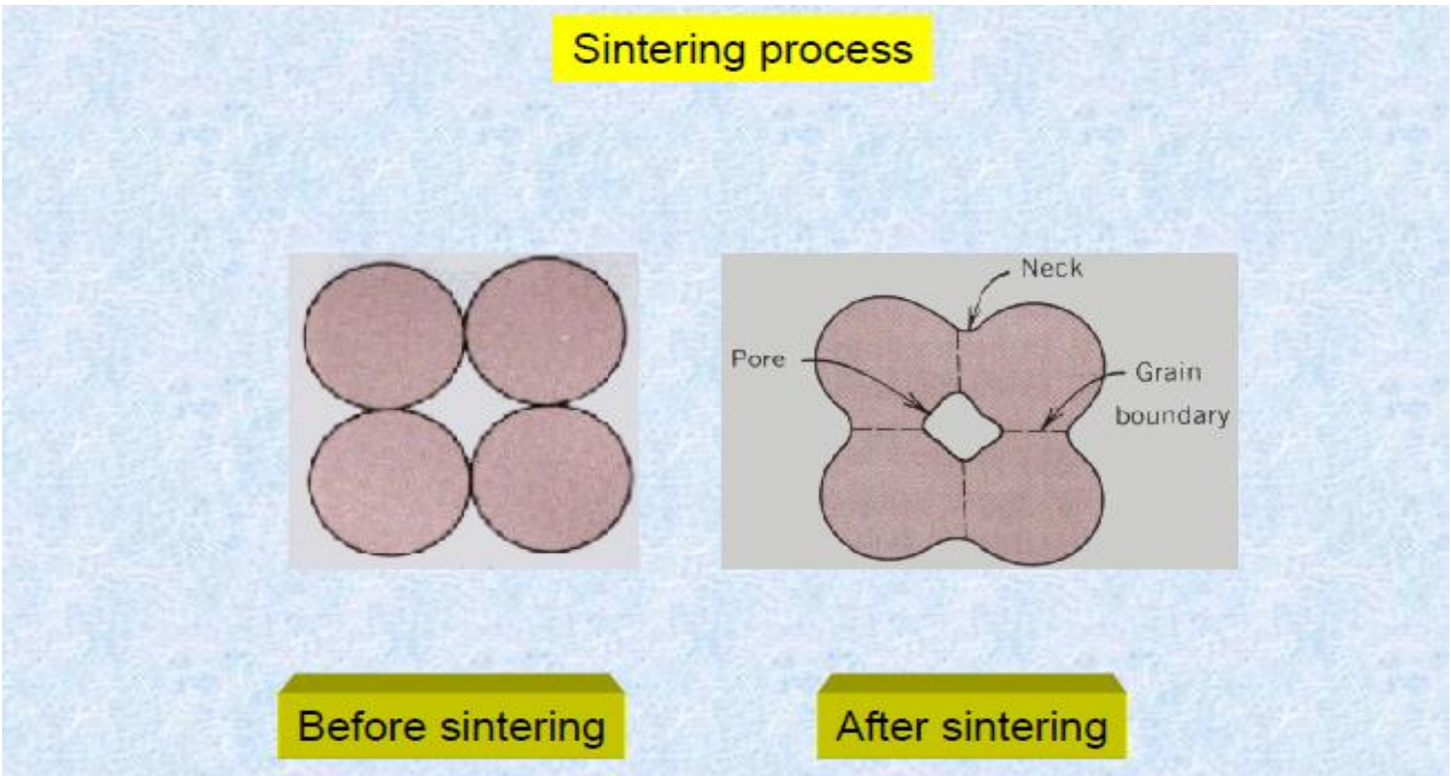

Sintered Compact Surface

- This breakthrough process successfully eliminates tension within the tile panel creating a uniformly large flat piece that can be cut or trimmed with precise accuracy.

Product Definition

The Sintering Process

- The atoms in the materials diffuse together under high temperature and pressure and thus creating one solid piece.
- This results in consolidating the powdery structure (during manufacturing) of tiles and thus reducing the porosity of the material.

Nexion
ITALIAN STYLE THAT INSPIRES

Product Definition

Why Sintering ?

- It makes the tile extremely compact, ie, Densification of material takes place.
- Densification makes the tile significantly porosity free.
  - This results in Water Absorption less than 0.08 %.
  - Requires Low Maintenance.
  - Longer life.
- Superior Technical Characteristics offer unique resistance to UV rays to maintain a stable colour in outdoor spaces.

Installation Mechanism

Hybrid Mechanism-

In this system, the cladding materials are anchored in place with structural adhesives, combined with safety hooks which support the weight of the slabs and provide very high levels of resistance.

This system is recommended for Nexion slabs' large size and slimline thickness. It allows irregular installation layouts with irregular alignment.
